

Decoding a Geological Message

This close up image of a recent 150-meter diameter impact crater near Amazonis Mensa and Medusae Fossae is another great example of geologic complexity of Mars. Craters of this size have been observed to form recently on Mars, so the fact that this crater is modified by erosion speaks volumes, and gives us a chance to decode some geological messages from the past.

uahirise.org/ESP_049167_1855

