

“Elementary, My Dear Deposit...”

ESP_050250_1435

In this image we see an impact crater with associated bright deposits that at first glance give the appearance of seasonal frost or ice accumulations. The Mars Reconnaissance Orbiter has an on-board spectrometer called CRISM that can distinguish between ices and other minerals. With its data, we can deduce through several lines of evidence that this is, in fact, not ice.

