

Corduroy Dunes

ESP_054161_2540

The permanent polar cap of Mars is encircled by sand dunes and looking like pulled threads, these dunes march across a fabric of patterned ground. At this time of the Martian year they are free of the seasonal dry ice that forms a temporary cover every winter. (317 km above the surface and the scene is less than 1 km across.)

