

Active Dunes in Wirtz Crater

These gorgeous dunes are likely active, with ripples on their upwind slopes and dark streaks on their downwind slopes forming and changing due to wind-driven sand motion. The dark lines and squiggles on the dune slope are formed by passing dust devils. (NASA/JPL/University of Arizona. Alt: 255 km, less than 1 km across.)

uahirise.org/ESP_021893_1315

