This image is of a region slightly to the southwest of where the MSL rover, called Curiosity, will land in August 2012. It shows three distinct terrains: (a) older plains, (b) an overlying unit with a distinct margin, and (c) recent sand dunes. The dunes indicate that the strongest winds tend to blow from the southwest toward the northeast.