

Streaks on the North Polar Layered Deposits

This image shows an exposure of the north polar layered deposits with strange streaks superimposed on the layers. These streaks may be formed by winds blowing bright water frost over the surface, removing frost from the surface, or blowing dark material over the frost.