

On the Hunt for New Impact Craters

How exactly can we tell if an impact crater is new? In this observation, we see a dark spot with a larger, rayed “blast zone” that was also apparent in a Context Camera image taken in 2011. However, a THEMIS image of the same area acquired in 2009 does not show the dark spot at all.