

A Fading Impact Crater

This cluster of craters formed quite recently from a weak impactor that broke apart in Mars' thin atmosphere before smashing into the surface. It was discovered by the MRO Context Camera (CTX) Team, who found a dark spot in a CTX image taken in 2008 that was not present in earlier Mars Odyssey Mission THEMIS images from 2005.