

Double Depressions or Expanded Craters on the Northern Plains

How did these double depressions form? One idea is that the inner depressions correspond to impact craters, or the floor deposits of impact craters. These are likely secondary craters that all formed at the same time from the ejecta of a much larger primary crater.