

Compositionally Diverse Bedrock

Regolith, particulate fragmented rock and fine grained soils, generally cover most of the surface of Mars. Mantles of rocky dust often mute the landscape, filling in topographic lows and burying boulders.