

Opportunity's Journey at Endeavour Crater

Opportunity has been on the western rim of 20-kilometer-diameter Endeavour Crater in Meridiani Planum for about two years investigating the 3-4 billion-year-old sedimentary layers of Cape York. Now, more than a decade after the Mars Exploration Rover Opportunity's 2003 launch, this HiRISE image captures the rover traversing south to new science targets and a winter haven at Solander Point.