

An Irregular Crater Intersecting Graben in Tractus Albus

This crater, of which only a small portion is visible in the full HiRISE image, is very irregularly shaped and might suggest that some underlying liquid was present that made it so elongated after the initial impact.