

Slumping Terraces on a Crater Wall

This image shows the western rim of a well-preserved 8.5-kilometer (about 5 miles) diameter impact crater. This slumped terrace, a result of the crater formation process, gives the crater a concentric ringed appearance.