

The Side of Chasma Boreale

The section here shows fine scaled layering and a major unconformity, where the azimuth of the beds changes markedly. This is characteristic of the polar layered deposits. The formation of the unconformity suggests a time when the lower sediments were being eroded rather than deposited.