The Mars rover Curiosity is exploring the Pahrump Hills in Gale Crater. The region contains sedimentary rocks that scientists believe formed in the presence of water. The bright features in the image are sedimentary rock and the dark areas are sand.