

Sedimentary Rock Layers on a Crater Floor

This image covers layered sedimentary rocks on the floor of an impact crater north of Eberswalde Crater. There may have been a lake in this crater billions of years ago, and the area was once considered a landing spot for the Mars Science Laboratory. There are many diverse rock compositions in this area.