

Southern Winter Frost Accumulations

The bluish deposits here near the rim of this crater is not consistent with frost deposits. These materials are most likely iron-bearing minerals that have not been previously oxidized (i.e., rusted), and have only recently been exposed to the surface when this small well-preserved crater was formed.