

The Wind-Scoured Lava Flows of Pavonis Mons

This deeply wind-scoured terrain type is unique to Mars. Wind-carved stream-lined landforms on Earth are called “yardangs,” but they don’t form extensive terrains like this one. The basaltic lavas on the flanks of this volcano has been exposed to wind for such a long time that there are no parallels on Earth.