

Dust and Frost

Sand dunes in the north polar regions of Mars show light coatings of dust (pale orange) blown partially across the dark basaltic sand. Around the edges of the dunes patches of seasonal dry ice remain. (320 km above the surface and less than 1 km across.)

uahirise.org/ESP_053129_2650

