

Fans and Valleys

Thick beds with varying tone are exposed along the edge of this fan. Shallow valleys that carve into the smooth upland surfaces outside of the crater may provide clues regarding the formation of the deposits. Many boulder-sized blocks sit on the interior crater floor beyond the toe of the deposits. (NASA/JPL/University of Arizona, 302 km above the surface and less than 1 km across)

uahirise.org/ESP_055110_2265

