

Bedforms and Bedrock

A close-up of deposits at the base of a crater wall shows a mound of bedrock with beautiful color contrasts. The variation in color represents diverse minerals in the rock. This crater is located in the Terra Cimmeria region of Mars. (NASA/JPL/University of Arizona. 253 km above the surface, less than 1 km across.)

uahirise.org/ESP_055407_1485

