

Bonus Beauty

During the planning of this image, we decided to extend it a bit further. That extension has given us a bonus beauty! The steep walls of this impact crater are covered with slope streaks formed by material falling down towards the crater's center. There are so many in this case that the crater is reminiscent of a delicate "dandelion clock." (NASA/JPL/University of Arizona)

uahirise.org/ESP_060857_1930

