

THE EVER-CHANGING SWISS CHEESE OF MARS

The South Polar cap of Mars has pits and mesas that in some places resemble a slice of Swiss cheese. The pits are expanding because the carbon dioxide is sublimating, but in other places new carbon dioxide deposits are building up on flat ground.