

DEEP IN VALLES MARINERIS

Here we see a section of a crater, 8 km in diameter, that exposes light toned layered sediments in the wall, which are fractured and faulted, perhaps as a result of the impact. Minerals detected here suggest that water was involved in the formation of these sediments, which may have been deposited in ancient aqueous environments like lakes.

LPL

HIRISE

uahirise.org/ESP_089134_1655