

COMPLICATED LAYERS AT THE NORTH POLE OF MARS

These layers don't stack neatly on top of each other. Sometimes layers are eroded, then more layered ice is formed, and then the whole stack of layers is eroded again. When this happens, you can sometimes see some layers appearing to truncate others (geologists call these features unconformities).

HIRISE

uirise.org/ESP_089277_2595