

Sandstone Cliffs and Hematite Lag Deposits of Ophir Mensa

This target was one of the first close HiRISE views of the enigmatic Valles Marineris interior layered deposits. These light-toned sedimentary deposits are of interest to scientists because they are partially composed of minerals like hematite that likely formed in the presence of liquid water.