

A LOOK AT A STEEP NORTH POLAR SCARP

This image reveals relatively dark streaks down the steep slope, so landslide activity has already started as the season changes. There is some direct illumination here close to noontime at this time of year, which may be sufficient to initiate some activity.