

LAYERED BEDROCK IN BETIO CRATER

The presence of tilted light-toned layers at the base of the central depression suggests that bedrock may have been initially uplifted but later collapsed to form a pit.

HIRISE

uahirise.org/ESP_016805_1565