

Slumping Terraces on a Crater Wall

ESP_035702_2270

This image shows the western rim of a well-preserved 8.5-kilometer (about 5 miles) diameter impact crater. The wall features a slumped terrace that extends all the way around the crater diameter. This slumped terrace, a result of the crater formation process, gives the crater a concentric ringed appearance.