

A Heart in Ascræus Mons

ESP_035807_1885

The feature indeed does look like a heart. It is located south of Ascræus Mons, which is a large volcano within the Tharsis volcanic plateau, so it is extremely likely that this feature was formed by a volcanic process. The feature rises above the surrounding terrain and we can see concentric ridges on its top.