

Frosted Dunes

ESP_O45311_1205

It is now late winter here in the Southern hemisphere, and these dunes are just getting enough sunlight to start defrosting the seasonal cover of carbon dioxide. Spots form where pressurized carbon dioxide gas escapes to the surface.

