

Frosty Alcoves on Kaiser Crater Dunes

ESP_O45614_1330

In this image, the dunes in Kaiser Crater are partially free of seasonal ice, with the contrast making it easy to see the ripples. Deep alcoves have been carved at the crest of the dune. We hypothesize that this is the result of the gas coming from the dry ice, destabilizing the sand at the crest.