

Icy Flow in a Crater

ESP_049028_2065

The material on the floor of this crater appears to have flowed like ice, and contains pits that might result from sublimation of subsurface ice. The surface is entirely dust-covered today. Probably there was ice here sometime in the past, but could it persist at some depth?

