

Jumbled Blocks on the Floor of Melas Chasma

ESP_058527_1695

This part of Melas Chasma has been the target for many previous HiRISE images due to its diversity of terrains and materials. This observation covers an area not previously imaged, revealing a chaotic jumble of bright layered sediments, perhaps resulting from large landslides. (NASA/JPL/University of Arizona, less than 1 km across.)

