

Everything is (Well) Illuminated

ESP_058538_0960

The south polar layered deposits are icy layers that have been deposited over millions of years, preserving a climate history of Mars. In this image the layers are well illuminated to accentuate the topography. (NASA/JPL/University of Arizona. Less than 1 km across.)

