

FAINT TRACES OF DARK FLOWS

This image shows some faint traces of dark flows along the headwall of an impact crater. These are relics of seasonal recurring slope lineae that formed on an equator-facing slope.