

SPRING FANS AT MACCLESFIELD

Gas blowing out from under the ice carries with it a load of dust that is deposited on the surface in a direction determined by the wind at the time of the eruption. Like windsocks, these fans in a polar area we've dubbed Macclesfield record the direction that the wind was blowing.